Lannom Farms grows A-MAZE-ing fun

Posted on Sep 29, Posted by Ken Beck Category Ask Ken Beck

By KEN BECK

The Wilson Post

GLADEVILLE -- If you've ever wanted to star in your own episode of "Lost," grab your family and head for Gladeville's Lannom Farms, which may hold a monopoly this fall on Wilson County corn mazes and pumpkin patches.

In reality, Lance and Cathy's Lannom's 5-acre corn maze has been created with sorghum in lieu of corn, so the stalks surrounding those who choose to meander here prove sweeter, thicker and greener.

Meanwhile the 5-acre pumpkin patch boasts eight varieties of genuine pumpkins (Fairytale, Aladdin, Magic Lantern, Field Trip, Gladiator, One Too Many, classic Jack-o-lantern and Baby Boo) for picking for décor or, better yet, for pies.

"Our maze is a random labyrinth with many twists and turns," Cathy said. "Presley (her youngest child) and I went in for 45 minutes, and we cheated and went out through the side because we couldn't find our way out. At many of the dead ends, you can find several of Lannom Farms' fall friends (two dozen scarecrows)."

[redacted]